“The Traction Line” took a meandering route from London to St. Thomas to Port Stanley in the early 20th century. With a large beach and sheltered harbour, Port Stanley was known as the “Coney Island of the Great Lakes.”

“The Traction Line” brought people to play on the beach, hit the casino and listen to the big band sounds at the famous Stork Club. It also transported white fish (perch) from the lake to NYC, all in one day! Take a trip back in time, enjoy the lazy days of mid-summer and all things lakeside—including the wonderful perch, fresh from the lake waters.
